The nutritional information provided is based on standard recipes, portion sizes, and testing conducted through accredited third-party labs, supplier data, and published resources. These values represent averages and are rounded to meet current FDA guidelines.

Due to the hand-crafted nature of our food, natural variations in preparation, cooking methods, seasonal ingredients, and supply chain differences may result in slight differences from the listed nutritional values. Ingredient substitutions or modifications requested by guests may alter the final nutritional content.

Please note: Cooked and browned potatoes (like our fries) may contain acrylamide—a naturally occurring chemical formed during high-temperature cooking. Acrylamide is recognized by the State of California as a potential cancer risk, though the FDA has not recommended avoiding foods that may contain it. For more information, visit www.fda.gov.

Allergen information is based on standard builds and does not account for special requests or cross-contact during preparation. Our kitchens use soybean and peanut oil and may handle common allergens like dairy, gluten, eggs, and nuts.
